

WHO RULES THE WORLD? (1)

When the last time I undertook telling you the entire truth, it seems I went over the top and promised you something that was impossible to do.

I will be unable of telling you the entire truth, as there are two areas in which I am helpless. These are Jews and gays. I lost every single encounter to them. As the first ones are protected by the memory of genocide and the worldwide shared compassion and the second ones are defended by the anonymity and a halo of the enlightened.

Therefore, if I am bound speaking about them, I shall try being very careful: I shall be speaking with a hand over my mouth, which is regrettably only half of the truth. Therefore, I shall be giving no rhetorical questions. Such as: “Who rules the world and the money?” or “Who dictates the politics?” or “What are the TV and the show biz propagating?”...

Those who tried to go down to the bottom of these questions are no longer trying to ask them. Everyone is as calm as a Belgian.

In order to name the difficult truth, one needs to remember simple things. Everything in the world has already been thought of. Everything is happening in accordance with the same laws of economics as well as nature. Almost all of the systems of society have already been tried out. The people of our generation alone were communists, and socialists, and capitalists. But always and despite of the governments the people were divided between the “masters” and the “bondmen”. If to talk in nowadays terminology it would be the “elite” and the “beetroots”...

During the change of systems only the inequality and the mentality remained the same: we keep on thinking in stereotypes as we used to. Only the content of the labels, by which we mark those who think differently changes.

The content on politician’s speeches hasn’t also changed much: they were talking gibberish then and they are talking gibberish now. (Especially during the meetings). Thus, the talking as well as the world-view of simple people is usually much more interesting than those of the “elite” know-it-alls. And that is understandable. The country folk ground their lives on wisdom of antecedents. The masters in the Parliament only sing: “From the foretime your sons may find strengths!...” And once they stop singing they continue living in accordance with the modernized rules and the elite moral created by them, and ignore all the laws that are only intended for common people, the fate of which is very hard: to reap and sow, to reap and sow, and this way toil from 5 in the morning till late at night. Because the masters speak and the folk must work, otherwise the granaries of the state would stand empty. Which means there would be no money to pay the masters their salaries. And it's not only the animals that want to eat.

These are the laws. And nobody argues. Some people are bound to do brainwork, others – manual work. Nobody discourages from exchanging. Once you are tired or bored from manual work, hire others and start managing them. You'll become a grand brainworker!

This is the practice in the world. And nobody is planning on disrupting it. Only what should our people feel when they work unbelievably hard from morn till down and sometimes even with few employers, and in the meantime the state granary is constantly empty. Seemingly we all pay taxes and choose the government ourselves and up their, at the top, there is always a shortage. And then you start thinking that it's not the granaries that are empty up there, it's the heads of those in the government – so many billions were squandered during the years of independence. And then you feel like grabbing your head and shouting with desperation: “Hey you, up there, is anyone responsible for anything?!! Vnimanije! Achtung! Uvaga...”

Or maybe “Do you speak English?”

The answer is all right in any language. We could translate it with the help of dictionaries. We are asking in human language: “Why is it so that the budget of our state is constantly empty? Who is responsible? Maybe the sack has a hole in the bottom? Or maybe we work too little for you? Then lets prolong the working day. We agree with everything. Just let us live a normal life: let the workers work, the service people – serve. Let the employers start new workplaces. And you can rule as much as you wish. Just don't bother us and most importantly, don't steel from the granaries of the state, as we once again won't have anything to feed our elderly people – the pensioners.

This is exactly what I believe will be the hardest thing to agree upon. Everyone wants to govern the state, even a dairymaid, and whenever time comes to take responsibility for the state money, nobody wants it.

The savings of people are lost: “I'm innocent!”

The banks and holding miraculously evaporate: “I'm innocent!”

The European Union funds intended for Lithuania are lost: “I'm innocent!”

The farms, the factories, and the ports - all were parcelled out and we still have no money. The remaining property of Lithuania is almost pocketed and our budget is still short. Where does our money go?

Information for further reasoning:

Only for privatisation of Stumbras the bribe of LTL 15 million was offered. I haste to inform you and calm you down. The ones who offered it, lost. The tender was won by those who offered a less amount.

No logic?

No wonder. Whenever the business is confused with politics, no market laws function. Thus the business people are neck or nothing trying to disassociate from politics. Julius Niedvaras from the Vilniaus bankas publicly demonstrates that he's apolitical. Bronislovas Lubys from Achema is trying to support not one but all of the political parties but still manages to miss the point and then tries explaining he wanted to support democracy, although afterwards he co-signs memorandums not with democracy but with specific politicians (i.e. conservatives). The elections for business people are like a game of roulette: you bet on a wrong party – you loose money.

You say, serves them right?

No. The sociologists are to blame for bad prognosis. Their sociological researches are of poor quality. Maybe they don't know how to survey people? Maybe they are corrupt as well? Plus, everything very much depends on the daily Lietuvos rytas that orders the surveys.

Do you remember an old scandal from a few years ago? R.Paksas was always amongst the most popular politicians and suddenly... he disappeared.

When media asked Vladas Gaižauskas, the director of Vilmorus why such thing happened, that Cock kindly explained, “Gedvidas Vainauskas struck it out, because he orders the ratings.”

Can anyone after that believe in sociological research? The only thing left, is to run quickly to the till of Lietuvos rytas and pay. You don't make it – it's your problem. They'll strike you out and you'll be gone for good. Just like in that directory “If you are not here, you don't exist at all!”

Not only politics give in to the sociological surveys. The advertising customers also do that. I somehow can never prove that my TV publika is over 300,000 copies per print and the TV antenna of G. Vainauskas is less than 200,000... Still, the survey results show, that 5-6 Lietuvos rytas readers read one copy of TV antenna, and the Respublika fans read... two copies of TV publika each. I don't make it to understand, why my readers are so stupid. Why the readers of G. Vainauskas share the publication with their family members and mine act strangely: after they read TV publika and forget something they just read – they run back to the newsstand and buy a new copy. A second copy of the same issue.

Will I also have to run to Gedvydas and pay? The advertising customers also sacredly believe in sociological researches. Thus, whilst distributing their budgets, the customers bring twice, three times or even ten times more money to Lietuvos Rytas, which uses so unfairly accumulated funds for dishonest competition with Respublika: buys the journalists and dumps the prices. Only for this reason we were supposed to punch the dishonest “leader” so badly that all of its “unclean thoughts” would spill out (by the way, the reserved Arvydas Sabonis after losing his hopes to protect the Žalgiris supporters from terror, was the first one to declare to the press that he is about to “whack someone”...).

This war is neither for money, nor for power. This is the war for fair competition. Any open businessman would agree with me that if to tolerate such corruption and deformation of market laws for a longer time, the honest competitor would go bankrupt. It doesn't matter who they are: the construction workers, brewers, sales people, or private teachers. The corruption even invaded the sports... Who could've thought that in our basketball, the Lithuanian religion, the corruption would become so widely spread that the kind-hearted giant Arvydas Sabonis would start thinking of whacking all the degenerated politicians?

Therefore, I dare to once again repeat: this war is not between G. Vainauskas and me. Today we are solving a historic question: What Lithuania we want to live in? (It has nothing to do with the President whom I do not respect). Will we continue lying looking into each other's eyes, or will we start speaking out the truth?

If I will make it to tell the truth, as I understand it and the way I personally experienced it, maybe you shall finally understand that nobody will succeed staying aside. You will face the reality sooner or later. And believe me – it is easier to do it sooner than later as then it may be too late to change something. Too big of a load is resting on the shoulders of “republicans” (Common, now you can start laughing and mocking us...)

If we continue living in accordance with the old plan, Lithuania will lose its pluralism and democracy. Everything, including conscience will cost money. Including the freedom of speech. (Whilst writing this article I was informed by my deputy that a member of the Parliament called and explained he couldn't manage to get his opinion printed even for money - everyone was afraid as the opinion was negative towards Lietuvos Rytas and if we printed it, everyone would be “surprised” this information came to us – the competitors.)

Information for further reasoning:

When G. Vainauskas decided to change the format of Lietuvos Rytas to the largest in Lithuania, a slogan was thought of: “There will be only one Newspaper in Lithuania and others...just little newspapers!”

Doesn't this remind you of anything? One Truth, one Party, one Leader. Hasn't the wheel of history turned too quickly?

"The King is dead. Long live the King!" A napoleon, to be precise – one who ignores all the laws and moral. Not only the prosecutors and the Prime Minister are grinding teeth from his power, but also the basketball legend Arvydas Sabonis. And this is understood: the new napoleon became so brassy, he no longer wastes his time to quarrel himself. He tells his wife, who tells off the MP and threatens A. Brazys, the contemporary trainer of Žalgiris.

And in the mean time, Mr. G. Vainauskas through his editorials governs the state and doesn't even hide while commanding the Prime Minister A. Paulauskas and the Vilnius Mayor A. Zuokas. He reads a lesson to some and pats others on the back. And nobody argues: if he tells the politicians to run to people, they do that.

And Mr. napoleon grows even brassier and formulates a new task in his editorial. This time for V. Junokas, the leader of the Special Investigation Service. After he pours dirt on his head and then demands proof that he is loyal. To be exact, if the SIS gets Tomkus behind the bars, this will be "impartial" and if this would happen to Zuokas, it would be "politicised"... You don't believe me? It is written in Lietuvos Rytas in black ink. I can prove it in any court. Even in the Constitutional, which is headed by E. Kūris.

Almost all TV channels, the largest business companies and cowardly politicians of our country, who are so scared because they are still vulnerable, support the politics of G. Vainauskas.

Information for further reasoning:

Listen to the notice of A. Zuokas carefully – once I told them to bring advertising, they ran, racketed their companies that previously only placed ads in Lietuvos Rytas.

Or maybe we should all get used to it? And to the licence of our napoleon? It is rather nice to watch from the side how a new monster is being created and that makes everyone cry later. It's a pity Sabas intervened. He understood what's happening and told the whole truth straight out.

It's easy for him. Napoleons are up to his knee. And what are we all supposed to do?

WHO RULES THE WORLD? (2)

I promised to tell the whole truth. But in order to do so we should first get used to the thought that for a while we here, in Lithuania should live without government, without the major businesspeople, and the media bosses (including myself). Only a bunch of criminals that just served their penalties and went out would remain free and rule.

Others would be locked away.

This is not blackmail, this is truth: as I said, I am just like anybody else. Because I am active in a political life and I am a businessman, I am forced to live in accordance with not especially transparent rules of life. And even though I am trying to be honest, I am ten times the scum when I am amongst them – otherwise I would be unable to defeat them.

But writing about what's happening here - I repeat – I shall be writing only the truth, because the journalists cannot consciously lie to their readers. You might make a mistake, you might interpret it wrongly, and you might trust a storyteller rather than a fact. But never tell a lie. On the other hand, it seems the media keeps on playing its games, listens to everything and writes only that what is useful, films everything and shows as much as it is necessary. Why doesn't the media like those who think differently? Why people with different opinion make others nervous? After all, it is so interesting for the society to find out why one or the other citizen has a different opinion on the subject of national importance? (Not necessarily about the President related scandal, but about other issues as well). We have been thinking alike for fifty years. And have been dressing alike. Even ate same meals (remember lunch sets or “fish days” in canteens?) Why do we think in stamps, in standards?

Because it is easier. No need to think. Suffer. Consider. And this way we become our own enemies.

And there were, yes, there were times when the media was trusted more than the Church. What happened? Nothing really. The media, just as the society split between the “paksists” and “putschists”. Is it a hacked reflection of the people? Let's say yes. And what happened with the professionalism of journalists? Already now all of the newspapers and TV channels have become over the top tendentious. They don't use different sources of information; do not listen to the second opinion.

The LNK News Service during the weekly overview Savaitės Panorama announces the “fact” about “milking” of the Vilniaus bankas as the major news, which is now with great pleasure escalated by Lietuvos Rytas. It sounded pretty much like this: Borisov, whilst talking with Niedvaras was trying to find out where did the rumours regarding the Vilniaus bankas came from. Niedvaras said that it might have been Tomkus or the competitors, and Borisov thought it might have been Hansabankas that might have paid for it 1 to 2 million. All this information is based on Borisov's notes that SIS found on his PC. All this was allowed into the air without asking the LNK “star” if it was true – nobody was asked, neither Borisov, nor Niedvaras, or heads of Hansabankas.

I'm not even speaking of myself, who received a bribe of 2 million. Now I am sitting and calculating, how many banks there are in Lithuania and how much money I could get if I got rid of them all (including Hansa).

And LNK didn't ask because they were afraid of telling the truth that nobody wanted and which is very simple: the rumours about the Vilniaus bankas came from the Vilniaus bankas itself. This was found by the Lithuanian State Security Department that was implementing the order of Valdas Adamkus. This happened in the end of the year 2002, before the famous issue of Vakaro žinios.

In general we stooped critically looking at ourselves, we don't listen to the opinion of those around us and slowly becoming deaf and blind. We become deadened. Thanks for that goes to journalists who's reportages and on TV screens and articles in newspapers let us understand that everyone in Lithuania went crazy, they cannot communicate. Everyone talks. Nobody listens.

Worse still – nobody wants to listen.

Doesn't anybody stumble on a fact that all of the opponents of “conspirators” start their speeches almost from an oath that they have not been “bought”, “hired by Moscow”, “politically engaged” and only want to say something they don't like. And everyone who reasons, doesn't like the fact that the president chosen by the people may be overturned "in a wrong way".

Just that...

Why is it so important? Because we live in a democratic country. Whatever is happening is not a problem of R.Paksas, but the problem of us all. If today the president will be sorted out in a wrong way, tomorrow anyone could be sorted out this way: the other president, a premier, a minister, or an editor (especially me).

Even tough, the behaviour of "paksists" is no better. They do not hear that the opponents of R.Paksas already proved that the president who lies to his people, losses trust, that the president, who's environment unlawfully and most importantly unfairly uses all of the power provided advantages, openly demoralises the society. Their argument "And what about others?" "What about the previous ones?" cannot hold an argument either. We have to start coming clean sooner or later.

By the way, this term "coming clean" is very stupid. Shouldn't it be "saying the truth"? Or try not to lie as hard as we can. At least publicly. Whenever we speak to people. For example: from the Parliament's tribune, from the House of President, from the government's office.

I wouldn't agree with another argument, which says we have to come clean now, in order to enter Europe clean!

Nonsense!

There is much more dirt in Brussels. The money is squandered even in bigger amounts. Next to Brussels, in Antwerp, the heart of mafia prospers. It is well known to the world for diamond trade and money laundering. By the way, the Brussels itself for quite a few times became known for paedophile.

Us, Lithuanians, are not as bad. No need to load us with all sorts of complexes. If I were a leader I would speak even more strictly: "Hey you, Belgians, clean yourselves and fall into rank, and only then us, Lithuanians will come to you!"

If to talk more about the complexes that the men in power are trying to hammer it home to us.

Remember the argument the men in power were trying to sell us when they wanted to trade Mažeikių nafta to Americans almost for free? Half a billion Litas is squandered in Mažeikių nafta every year, so Americans will come and sort it out. Do you understand what that said? Mažeikių nafta was a state institution. The state is governed by state servants. They steal themselves, share, and control everything. And they put the blame on our people. As if we don't know how to utilize the property of our state.

And if I said differently? We don't know how to elect a normal government. Normal government would have given the Mažeikių nafta for privatisation to normal businessmen (i.e. Mr. B.Lubys or the owners of Vilniaus prekyba), hundreds of millions would flow into the budget. Lots of schools and hospitals would open in the country, and even if we then sold the same Mažeikių nafta to Russians or Arabs, the money would have still remained ours – in Lithuania. Because the local businesspeople live in Lithuania and the interest in Lithuanian banks is much higher than that of the American or Swiss banks.

Even though, we gave the property of Lithuania to Americans, and there is no "nationality" in business: no role the dependence to a party or national patriotism can play here. Therefore, only a total idiot (I beg your pardon, but this is the term of the General Prosecutor Antanas Klimavičius, who after studying the contract with Williams publicly over the TV announced: "I have never seen a more idiotic contract!") to put the politics and business in one bunch, when we speak of normal business.

Thus, I boldly can say that everyone who agreed to it and signed it are idiots. We are concerned with that only to the extent that is allowed to us as these people govern us. The people have nothing to do with it. It is the officials who are to blame, the ones who were either stupid or received rather good bribes to allow Americans in and make us believe they would protect us from Russians...

As it is said, protect us from friends and we will protect ourselves from enemies. Maybe I will be subjective, but I know hundreds of examples when us, Lithuanians, when we were a part of the Soviet Union, would rob (or “racket”) Russians. For sausages produced by us we would sweep clean the Moscow’s budget, we were building highways and developing agriculture as well as shipping.

And what about the “Westerners”? They stole our ships, Mažeikių nafta... It is strange they didn’t peel off the asphalt of the roads. And how many minor fishy “businessmen” were drawn here from Italy, Germany, Australia, and the US. If we had so many after the war, we would have not only freed ourselves from Russians but would have occupied Moscow. And how many more are about to come. And we will have to believe them all. Because the government has loaded us with a complex that they are smarter. And I say that the foreigners are twisted. And more experienced...

Especially we have to be careful with Americans. Because the US is governed by Jews. And Jews are very very clever. Us Lithuanians still have a lot to learn from them. Like tolerance towards each other. Good will first of our own and then to other nationalities. We shouldn’t be jealous of each other and not try eating each other up, but help each other in a difficult hour. Listen less to other know-it-alls and manage ourselves. When they see us jumping so in front of foreigners, they cannot help it but use this opportunity.

Remember, when we just started questioning the need for Mažeikių nafta contract, we at once received a letter from few US congressmen who were criticizing us for objecting the US investments.

And when the Americans sold us to Russians and made a lot of money, the US congressmen didn’t write... Pity. They could explain what happened? Even V.Landsbergis and A.Kubilius were lost...

When all of the Lithuania press were praising the Williams the sole Respublika was strictly defending its position – this contract is idiotic! (One more thanks to A.Klimavičius for this term!). Then Mr. Smith, the USA Ambassador visited me in the publishing office and softly reproached me to no longer provoke the anti-American mood in Lithuania. As an object for exchange he promised that Williams heads would give an interview during the which I forced them to acknowledge that that contract was useful for Americans, not Lithuania. Frankly speaking, they swindled us. The contract was signed. And were did the USA Ambassador Mr. Smith after his term go?

Well, he went to Williams. To the ones who swindled us.

What does it have in common with politics? This is pure business! By the way, even the mafia bosses after shooting somebody explain: this is only business!

Therefore, if to speak about the world of crime, one should not get involved into politics. Everything is much simpler: the politicians also do business.

When Vytautas Lubinas, the Director of Respublika and myself were visiting USA 9 years ago, we were visiting our old acquaintance Simas Velonckis. (He is a friend of all governments – starting with V.Landsbergis and finishing with A.Brazauskas, and has a lot of influence in the US Congress and the Jewish community). Then we received a phone call from Respublika office: we were told that the contemporary government started a total attack against our publishing office and arrested all of the company accounts. This was in response to criticism towards millions squandered in Tauras bank. When he saw how the Director and I were shocked, Simas Velonckis smiled at us and calmed us down: “Don’t worry, there is a way out! Hurry to Lithuania and take care of business and after a few days I will organize you a visit of two US Congressmen to Lithuania and everything will be fine!” To the question what will be fine he explained: “They will go down on the airplane. They will have no official meetings with anyone. They will only talk to Respublika.” And to the question what they will talk about with us he responded laconically: “Whatever you want them to.

About the weather, ladies, or you could just drink whiskey and keep quiet. Two hours later they will leave, they would have met nobody, and you can write about anything you like. For example: “America supports Respublika!” “The US Congressmen will not tolerate the attacks towards the free press...” I guarantee you, such visit will help you! Because the entire world is afraid of Americans.”

The same day V.Lubinas and myself were flying back to Lithuania. Although, we said no to Simas’ service even though it didn’t cost too much...

Only USD 200,000.

This is how much the US politics costs.

WHO RULES THE WORLD? (3)

Before continuing the search for truth I would like to once again remind you of the two areas in which I am helpless- the Jews and gays. I lost every single encounter to them.

I had an encounter with the latter ones due to the daily Vakarų žinios, the contemporary editor Ričardas Jarmalavičius with a feel of snobbism typical to Jakilaitis set a goal to himself to find out what sort of people are called gays in Lithuania? The evening daily didn't want to judge them; it only wanted to find out who they were and what usually they get occupied with. (I am talking here about occupational activity, not sex.)

And the fact that this need was existent in Lithuania is proved by the fact that every single copy of an issue, in which the cycle of articles called “They Call Them Gays” was swept off the shelves of newsstands. The triage was expanding as yeast dough: then, fifteen, twenty thousand copies per day!... Doesn't this show the interest of the public? Doesn't it have the right to know who are gay? If yes, why the daily Vakarų žinios was prohibited even twice and every single time it had to change its name?

And even as it still remained unclear how many of them there are and who they are, we managed to find one thing out – gays are influential and powerful! If they can close down a newspaper and organize a powerful contraband attack, this means we have lots of them. And they are a power. And a power always makes the public feel troubled. Especially if it distributes amongst influential posts and masks itself well, and you don't even know who is attacking you and for what reason.

I suspect that rather a few of these people are within the military system, the President's House and especially in the "little ex-president houses", which are now seeking for a return match in politics. Even Gediminas Vagnorius was unable to stand their attacks during the term of Valdas Adamkus. (Isn't it interesting why the senior editor of Lietuvos rytas Gedvydas Vainauskas was unable to sustain his friend from Sri Lanka in the premier's chair?)

Whilst printing the cycle of articles called "They Call Them Gays" I personally would receive the phone calls of famous Lithuanian people who asked not to publish their names. After such phone calls I usually couldn't get a grip, thinking to myself: "Who could've thought..."

No need to talk about the world of art and fashion.

Or televisions, which then and now are savagely attacking Respublika. Apropos look closer to the content of TV shows and soap operas and think of what they are propagating: there is almost no such TV product, which wouldn't have a blue character, a gay as a main hero in it. Let me remind you: "Six feet under the ground" (all gays), "Aquarium" ("Marilyn Monroe" - a gay), even the comic of Dviračio žynios Pylipukas is acting as a gay in Burbulas soap opera... I hope he only acts as one.

I personally have nothing against those gay people. There is enough space for everyone in this world. But why are they every night trying to invade my home through TV? Why do they force their lifestyle to our children and grandchildren? What are they constantly demonstrating to us? That the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah is inevitably drawing near?! If this is all they want us to tell, we understood it long time ago. How many times do you need to repeat it? Any channel you switch on - it's all the same on all of them!

This is what happens when the right of the public to be informed is taken away. It is unclear who to address and who to argue with. And the most importantly, you never know when to expect a strike... (At least I will have some clarity and know for what.)

After all, any person is attracted to his or her nature. It is natural they choose their occupational activity according to their perversity and pursuits: the sadists are attracted to sobering institutions, where they can beat up drunk customers, the pedophiles - to kindergartens and schools, where they can peacefully abuse children, the area of sexual pervers, if to continue the same track, should be gynecology...

If you accept my logic, maybe you could also accept my logical question: how could we protect our young ones from people of bad will if the public doesn't know who they are? Did you see what happened to our president when he found out what sort of people are in his environment? When he finally found out who that Smailytė and Borisov were, it was way too late...

Unfortunately, the timely information wouldn't have saved our president. He knew Renata Smailytė from way back then and she was a friend of a hairdresser Tatjana, who was raising her child, the father of whom was the scary Kikalishvily. Yes, the same Kikalishvily who was photographed with Valdas Adamkus, Česlovas Juršėnas, Artūras Zuokas and other famous Lithuanian politicians.

But Rolandas Paksas is to be sorted not because that Kikalishvily was in Miami talking to Yosif Kabzon who is titled the godfather of Russian mafia. Plus he is gay, i.e. is a representative of a most powerful nation in the world.

As I mentioned, now I have to be writing very carefully and weight every single word, I will try being as clever as possible, and will speak with a hand over my mouth, because I once my long tongue already got me into trouble. So I don't advice others to do so either.

People, be watchful and don't give in to provocations! And in the same time try understanding what happened that the genocide politics was started to be associated not only with politics but also with international mafia.

People, my dear readers, could any of us think that the members of international mafia would start covering their dirty activities with the memory of holocaust victims? Could you imagine the bigger blasphemy – the genocide tragedy is serving the criminals of Jewish origin!

And mostly I do not understand why the Jewish community keeps silent and tolerates this? They either no longer care for the memory of they brutally murdered compatriots, or they act hand in hand with the criminals who are paying them good money for it?

I personally got involved with this after the death of my deputy, the journalist Vitas Lingys. For his bold articles and civil position he was shot by Vilnius Brigade criminals, headed by the dekanidzes, kaces, eizenshteins, neifelds, and brandveins of Jewish origin... IT was due to these parasites that such a Lithuanian man put his head down for the bright future of our country, who loved the country not by words but by actions. But after the terrible tragedy, the Lithuanian Jewish community didn't protest when the "godfathers" of mafia tried to hide behind their Jewish nationality.

When the organizer of assassination Boris Dekanidze was arrested, his father Georgij Dekanidze, a true "legitimate thief", was openly speaking about being a Jew, persecuted by anti-Semites from Respublika and the prosecutor's office, and the Lithuanian Jewish community was peacefully tolerating this defensive tactics and not even once disassociated themselves from it. Furthermore, they were creating a negative opinion about us not only in Lithuania but in Israel's press and were pushily repeating that we don't love Jews.

Respublika, which was the only one that fought with the Vilnius Brigade then and with the Panther, which was protected by the men in power Aras. It was called an anti-Semitic newspaper and the journalists of my law and order were called the new Respublika Brigade that terrorizes and rackets fair Jewish businessmen from M & S International (the Panther) company, which was fictitiously registered in Antwerp.

Even in the world congress of publishers the colleagues were asking me why I was called a savage "anti-Semite". I explained everything very clearly to them: if mafia that is led by Jews shoots my partner and the best friend, why should I love and respect them?

And everyone understood me. Although the American press (i.e. Newsweek) only after one year since the death of Vitas Lingys found boldness to spell it out that Panther was not the Russian but Jewish mafia.

Even America finally realized that mafia is nor grouped in accordance to nationality: Sicilian, Jewish, Irish or Russian but long ago grew into an international criminal organization, closely related even to terrorists. The Jewish nationality and the memory of genocide victims was useful to them as a cover.

It is a pity that Lithuanian Jewish community doesn't understand of doesn't want to understand this and still doesn't disassociate from their criminal fellow-countrymen. Although ten years ago they were persistently protecting them and were offering one hundred thousand for the finder of the murderer of V.Lingys.

Unfortunately they never kept the promise.

And in the mean time they keep on demonstrating how comfortable it is to hide their crimes under a trustworthy cover.

Is it worthwhile wondering that Gedvydas Vainauskas didn't take long to use this situation for his purpose and whose Lietuvos rytas with calm heart after the death of V.Lingys continued doing business and for money meekly printed public announcements of Gregorij Dekanidze, demanding the release of his son Boris, who was so unfairly persecuted by anti-Semites.

Maybe it was then that Gedvydas noticed how comfy it is to have a good "roof" or a cover after committing a crime, which provides a trustworthy shelter from penalty for breaching the laws.

Probably he and his friends (Benas Gudelis and Gediminas Vagnorius) were scared of circumcision procedure, so they chose a less painful and no less effective cover (if to speak in the terminology of criminals – the “roof”), which still helps them feel unpunishable.

They chose the Lithuanian religion – the basketball and more specifically, Benas (by the way, he also has some Jewish blood) grabbed the team from Panevėžys Sema and Gedvydas took Statyba of Vilnius under his wing, which was later renamed into Lietuvos rytas.

And in order to assure that the newcomers to basketball wouldn't risk their money too much, their friend Gediminas Vagnorius thoughtfully promised to them to transfer few hundred thousands into their budgets of the teams... Moreover, whilst the term of Gediminas Vagnorius as a premier, the state founded institutions were pressurized to support his fellow's team Lietuvos rytas even if they had their own teams to support. Like Alita champagne factory.

I hope I answered the open question of Arvydas Sabonis: “Why everything in Lithuania is topsy-turvy and the LKL champions Žalgiris team get money only... for as if they won bronze medals?” Because corruption flourishes in our country's government, the media, and sports.

There was no way that our premier could have given the money won by our champions before he could pay his friend from Sri Lanka. Maybe he borrowed money whilst on vacations, maybe he gambled it all on the beach, and maybe he shared – who knows now.

In any situation the appetite grows while eating... G.Vainauskas really went to town and no longer asked the businessmen for advertising in his paper, but demanded to “support” basketball, and the ones who were trying to fight back were cornered by such arguments as: “What? Don't you love basketball?!”

Who could predict that this overflow of “love” that was shared without any taxes by G.Vainauskas with other major shareholders of Lietuvos rytas, would raise interest in the prosecutor's Kęstutis Betingis' head? Plus, he would find out that through the basketball club and with the help of Vilnius bankas not only money was laundered but also the riches of the trade union...

This is when the new cover came in handy: “Help! Basketball is in danger!!!”

The premier G.Vagnorius was especially fond of hiding behind basketball. Whenever he would receive criticism from Respublika that the government panders Lietuvos rytas, he would run to television and say that he could only be attacked like that by those who do not love basketball. Speaking in short, he egged the fans onto us.

It is natural that such unpunishability produced a Napoleon, who doesn't care about any laws. The basketball club was turned into a money laundry. And now he can avoid any discussions at all and pretend he is not bothered, that he is at peace and dignified. He only cares for Lithuanian basketball! (How could you not care for money laundry when such sums were paid for “prizes”: three million litas per half year!)

Shouldn't Lietuvos rytas readers know about it? How longer can we pretend that nothing is happening?

Or maybe somebody knows what Gediminas Vainauskas and his fellows should do in order for Lietuvos Rytas to attract the attention of its readers to this matter? I am meekly waiting for an answer.
